Meet Finley

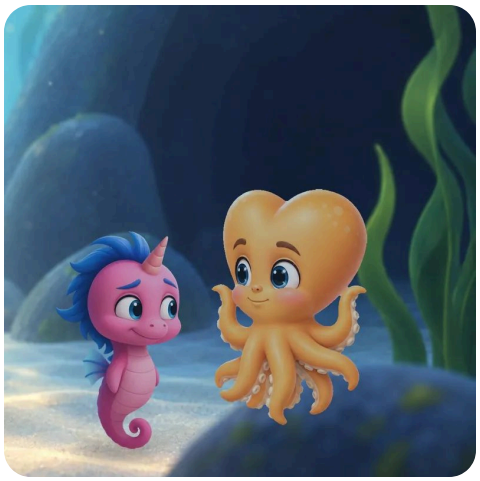

Finley gets scared — and takes small steps anyway. No need to ask about your child's fears; Finley goes first.

Finley sorts his pebbles by color. Pink, blue, pink… Oops! One rolls away, right to the mouth of a dark cave. Finley stops and looks.

Finley pauses. His fins tremble. He isn't ready to go closer yet.

Hugo stops beside him. "Want company?" Finley nods. He's still scared. They pause together.

Your child can answer, point to a picture, or simply keep listening.

If it feels right: "I wonder what Finley would like Hugo to do next." It's okay to just keep reading.
